Free as the wind

I see green seeds on the trees.

I see the wild wind blow the trees and they sway.

I see the wind scatter the seeds.

I find the green seeds on the street by my feet.

I pick up the seeds and sow them in rows.

Bees bug me as I pull up the weeds.

I feel as free as the bees.

More than that, I feel as free as the wild wind.

I can read.

The storm

The storm sweeps in from the cold north.

A stork flies in the fort from the port.

Trees sway in the wind. Twigs are torn off and swept away.

The storm's wild wind blows the boats and tosses them to and fro'. Sails are torn from the masts.

Men pull coats tight and battle the cold and wild north wind.

At last the wind settles.

In the lull, the stork flies away.

I can read.

Zed and Zap

Zed, the zebra, has a zest for life.

Zed kicks his heels and zips back and forth to the trees.

Zed meets Zap - another zebra.
Zap also has a zest for life.

See them gallop and kick up the dust as Zed and Zap zip back
and forth to the trees.

When the dust has settled, see the zig - zag trail.

I can read.

Dazzled

Zed and Zap, the zebras, feel a bit frazzled.

They zipped in 'zig - zags' back and forth to the trees and made a dusty trail.

Zed and Zap feel puffed.

They huff and puff and need a rest.

Zed has dazzled Zap with his speedy gallop and his jazzy zig - zag coat.

I can read.

Wag

Wag, the dog, wags his tail.

He sniffs the grass as he finds a snail trail.

A cobweb drips wet with rain.

The wind blows off the droplets but it rains again.

More snails and snail trails for Wag to follow. Wag sniffs the grass.

Wag follows the criss - cross trails and wags his tail.

I can read.

The wheel

William whisks the wobbly wheel off his wagon.

Wag smells a whiff of a Sunday roast on the wind.

William went to the camp to ask for help.

Wag runs by William's heels whilst sniffing the wind.

When Will and Wag meet the men from the camp and ask for help, the problem is solved.

William rolls the mended wheel back to his wagon.

Will grins and Wag pants.

The wheel is mended and they feel well - fed.

I can read.

Meals

“Can we eat beans for tea?”

“Yes, we can eat eggs and beans on toast for tea.”

“Can we eat meat and beans for a treat?”

“We can eat the remains of the roast, green peas and leeks in a creamy cheese sauce.”

“We can eat the beans on toast for supper.”

“I can re-heat the meat. Please stop day - dreaming and set the table.”

“Jump up on that seat to eat this feast.”

I can read.

A simple spread

“Can you cut that loaf of bread and get the cheese please?”

“Wait till your dad sees this spread. His best meal is a simple feast - bread, cream cheese and pickles to eat with a cup of tea.”

“May I eat cheese and jam instead please?”

“H...mmm... I am just teasing. Yes you may.”

“Please set the table and put your Grandma at the head. Then we can tuck into this simple spread.”

I can read.
